HOUSES OF OLD PENDLETON

This information , found in the Pendleton Historical Commission Library, was gathered by Miss Henrietta Seabrook and Mrs. H. P. Sitton. It has not been edited or checked for accuracy other than to eliminate obvious typographical errors for fear of losing some of its flavor. Miss Seabrook died in 1957 which is the nearest that the time of preparation could be established. Obviously, when "present owner" is mentioned, it is not 1984 but more likely 1950-60.

This is the first of two parts. The second part will contain a few notes about the early residents of the Pendleton area in addition to that about specific houses.

THE EDITOR

ALEXANDER - 148 West Main St. (West side of square) Dr. John Maxwell who married Miss Mary Alexander lived there - later W. E. Hall and various families. Then owned by Hunnicut. Torn down 1960. Last owned by J. C. Sloan. Barn was built with logs of original house. Called the Major Elijah Alexander Place from the Confederate Major who lived there. He was born in N. C. in 1910. (Prob. 1810).

ALTAMONT - 3 miles West from Pendleton in Fant's Grove (West side of 18 Mile Creek) Built 1808 by Col. Thomas Pinckney, Jr., later owned by Mrs. Fred Brown, sold 1938 to settle estate. Torn down by Clemson College. Had 6 marble mantels, 2 were very fine. 1 is now in Trustee House (House next to Calhoun Mansion).

ARCADIA - On Three and Twenty Creek 3 miles east of Pendleton. Built by Capt. James C. Griffin - later owned by Paul Dickson who inherited it from his father, M. C. Dickson. Nolonger standing.

ASHTABULA - About 3 miles east of Pendleton, Route 88, left side of road. Built by Arthur S. Gibbes. Doctor. Z. Taliaferro from VA, Broyles, Jas. Latta, Robert Latta. Robert Adger bought and gave to his daughter Sarah, wife of William Belton Warren. His daughter Clarissa Bowen was living there during the Civil War. Francis J. Pelzer, Wm. Inglesby (Ingoldsby), F. W. Symmes (Mead Corp.).

EDITORS NOTE - Has now been restored and is open to the public on Sundays during the summer months.

BELVIDERE - See MICASSA

BENSON HOUSE - 130 East Queen St. Now owned by Mrs. Mauldin. Owned at one time by J. T. Hunter, later sold to Mrs. Frank Mauldin. Enoch B. Benson (1816), Elder E. B. Benson of Hopewell Church (1832), Berry Benson (born 1789), Dickinson & Wragg. Mrs. Peter Gaillard refugeed there during War.

BEVERLY BENDS - On road between Pendleton and Central. W. W. Simons, burned - part of Dr. H. C. Miller's place.

BOONE - Sandy Springs. Bishop Boone, a minister to China (1st Bishop of China) lived near the old Camp Ground.

BOSCOBEL - On right of Anderson Road. Judge Prioleau - Family of M. Alexander, bought by Dr. John B. Adger in 1858, H. C. Summers, Sr., now Boscobel Lake (owners J. C. Summers and H. C. Summers.

CAMPOBELLA - Swaney Lane, near Riverside Colored Church. Archibald Campbell, J. A. Aull. Ben Keese (colored) bought it, sold to B. W. Swaney who is tearing it down.

CHERRY HILL - Gerish Milliken Mill site. Built by Dr. Samuel Cherry in 1843. Major Gen. Seaborn, Allen Barnette. Damaged by cyclone 1884 almost entirely.

CHEVES, JUDGE - Place on Seneca River below Pendleton near Portman Shoals. Building 125 t. long. Known as Teague Place in later years. Was curiously constructed. In ruins.

COLD SPRINGS - Riggs Drive Section of Clemson. Built by Mrs. John Ewing Colhoun, widow of John E. Colhoun, one of the first U. S. senators from S. C. and mother of Mrs. J. C. Calhoun. Mrs. James Crawford, David Sloan, now Poe's estate. Torn down.

DAWSON - 2095 S. Mechanic St. House now torn down. Dawson (Thomas) came from England, was a drummer boy in English Army. Was in Battle of Waterloo under Wellington, later a gardener for Queen Victoria. While in Pendleton, was a Baptist minister, founded Pendleton Baptist Church. House stood where N. H. Campbell now lives. Miss Sallie Dawson, a sister, lived with him and taught school in a small adjoining house. Sallie Dawson's house was on main highway built close to street on land between H. H. Campbell and A. W. Hall's residence. Location, with new house, now owned by Misses Boggs (Annie Lee and Ruth).

FARMER'S HALL (First) - 106 W. Queen St. In 1815, first meeting place was house now owned by Mays. Later E. C. Edens. Scenic wallpaper made in England representing the Four Seasons - one season on each wall of large room- was sold in 192? to Charleston Museum. This building was also used in services of St. Paul's Episcopal Church prior to building of present church in 1822. Farmer's Society sold building to Female Academy to accomodate boarding pupils, and many years after the Academy sold it to Col. David S. Taylor. Various families afterward lived there.

FARMER'S HALL (Present) - Was first intended for Court House for Pendleton District in 1826. Walls were built up to windows when work was suspended at formation of Anderson County. Farmer's Society bought unfinished building and balance was built in 1828. Brick columns at end and extending roof over them as it now stands were added in 1843 by Calvin Hall, the mason.

FEMALE ACADEMY - See MARSHALSEA

FLAT ROCK - See ROCKCELL

FORT HILL - The oldest part (four main rooms) was built in the early years of 1800 by Rev. James McElhenny, second pastor of Hopewell (Old Stone Church). He named it Clergy Hall, because he and his son-in-law, Rev. James Archibald Murphy, (who was also his assistant) lived there together. Mrs. John Ewing Colhoun first purchased about 1825 and gave it to her daughter Mrs. John C. Calhoun.

John C. Calhoun named this plantation home Fort Hill in honor of Fort Rutledge erected on the Seneca River by Gen. Williamson, and also situated on this property on a hill. Ft. Rutledge was named for John Rutledge Pres. (?), SC. For some years after Mr. and Mrs. Calhoun's death, Thomas G. Clemson and his wife Floride Calhoun Clemson lived there. Thos. G. Clemson died 1888 leaving all his Fort Hill property to be used to establish an agricultural college. Clemson College was founded 1893.

FRIENDVILLE - See See MICASSA

HARD TIMES - East Queen Extension. Below Thos. G. Watkins. Small log house. Mrs. Ellen Poe and family lived there during Conf. War.

HEADLONG HALL - La France, SC. Built by Major B. F. Sloan. Major Sloan built and operated the Pendleton Factory in 1834 until after the Confederacy making "block yarns" which were used in the old hand looms of ante-bellum daysto make home-spun and a basis for jeans. The first machinery for the mill was made in Patterson, NJ and was hauled on wagons from Hamburg, SC. In 1865, it went into the hands of B. F. (or Wm.) Perry. In 1884, A. J. Sitton was sole owner. After his death, it was owned and operated by his son Eugene W. Sitton who sold the factory to La France Co. who enlarged the plant and manufactured tapestries. The first factory has been called the second largest in operation in America. The postoffice was called Autun, meaning Town of Augustus, but was changed to La France after new company acquired ownership. All owners of the Pendleton Factory lived at Headlong Hall.

HICKORY FLAT - About 4 miles east of Pendleton, about mile east of Route 88 (Old Greenville Rd.). Built by D. K. Norris (1st. Trustee Clemson College). Later owned by John Long' estate. Walter L.

Wilson, A. S. Eakes.

HOPEWELL - Home of Gen'l Andrew Pickens. Has been called "Hopewell on Keowee". Near Cherry's Crossing on east side of Seneca River where the Blue Ridge R. R. spans the river. This spot was the scene of several important treaties with the Cherokees and Gen'l Andrew Pickens. The Treaty of Hopewell was made underneath the shade of a large red oak tree, known later as Treaty Oak. Gen'l Pickens owned a large section of land on the Seneca River. These lands had been granted to him by Gen'l Wm. Moultrie who was Gov. of SC 1785 to 1787. His house was destroyed by fire in early 1800. The spot is marked today (Treaty Oak) by a mass of crumbling brick and stone and a boulder with a bronze plate. Pickens named his last home "Tamassee", early in 1800 (before 1806) leaving "Hopewell on Keowee" to his son Col. Andrew (War of 1812) who was later Gov. of SC from 1816-18. The house now standing was built by the Gen'l for Andrew Jr. of logs weatherboarded over. It was bought by David Cherry in 1835 and has long been known as the "Cherry Place". Various families have lived there through the years. Hopewell-Keowee or Cherry Place is now preserved by the U.S. Federal Sanctuary. Gen'l Pickens gave his son Ezekiel a lower section of his property who built a house (near the first house of worship, Presbyterian Hopewell-Keowee, named for home of Gen. Pickens; a log building erected 1790 about 40 rods east of Ezekiel Pickens house. A tablet now marks the spot of this first church. Tradition says it was burned, catching from a forest fire. A larger church was necessary and the foundation of the present "Old Stone Church" were laid in 1797.

HUNTER, JAMES - 203 South Mechanic. Land first owned by Wm Werner, sold to Col. D. S. Taylor 1839. James Hunter bought land 1847. Later, in 1860, built house and bought rear property in 1865 from Wm. Van Wyck (heir of Sam Van Wyck). Owned by Jas. M. Terrie his grandson. James Hunter had a shop, blacksmith and iron forge works on corner of short street and highway and small brick building has been used for club-house for young men of town and armory, or arsenal during the Confederacy. Jas. Hunter and family lived there while present house was being built. Miss Mary Hunter, a noted school teacher, conducted a school early 1840s or 30s in the house next to Thomas Dawson's Jas. Hunter's shop. Her school and home was next to Miss Sallie Dawson on either side of shop. She was a half-sister of Jas. Hunter. Later she lived in small house in front of Dr. Wm. Jenkins' house and in a little house where now stands the home of (Norton Hunter, W. E. Seabrook) M. M. Hunter, 204 East Main - house now used is new. This small building in front of Dr. Wm. Jenkins' house was a small hospital for soldiers, building was behind what is now colored church, next to Ralph Hunter's residence.

JONES HILL - 1 mile south on Anderson Highway, now Meehan's Antique shop - a different house. Owned and built by Captain Jones who was Capt. of Jones Rifles, a House Defense Co. during the Confederacy. Others who lived there or owned property were Christial Hanckel, Dr. John Maxwell, Jas. Hunter, Mrs. E. L. C. Terrie, Jack Harris, J. L. Orr - present owner John Meehan.

KEOWEE - Home of John Ewing Colhoun, brother of Mrs. John C. Calhoun and son of Mrs. J. E. Calhoun of Cold Springs. His son Ransom Colhoun was killed in a duel with Col. Rhett of Charleston during the Confederacy. Last duel in Pendleton. He was buried on Keowee Plantation as are his parents. Later belonged to J. W. Crawford. Later bought by Dr. O. M. Doyle who lived there a short while. Burned. Owned by Clemson College. (Off SC133 north of Clemson)

KNAUFF - Duke Street. Old house was on short street between N. H. Campbell, Jr. & Dr. C. C. Morton homes - directly back of N. H. Campbell house. House built in 1832 from land bought from Chas. Miller. William J. Knauff was a cabinet maker and many pieces of furniture he made are still prized. Mrs. Calhoun persuaded him to come from Charleston. Fort Hill has several handsome pieces he made for Mrs. Calhoun & Thos. G. Clemson.

LABOR SCHOOL - 6 miles from Pendleton just off of Rt. 88 on right side of road. The Pendleton Manual Labor School was incorporated in 1834. It was near Carmel Church. School was under the direction of Rev. John L. Kennedy. The school continued for a few years. Rev. Kennedy taught at Pickens Court House, Thalian Academu & other places & became famous as a teacher of boys.

LIBERTY HALL - 621 S. Mechanic. Built by Thomas J. Sloan, W. F. Hall, Bonneau Harris, now known as Harris Hall.

LONG HOUSE - Portman Rd. - Col. Francis Kinloch Huger - When Col. Huger was leaving his Long House place near Pendleton for Charleston he presented the Pendleton Farmers Society with the Sun dial that stood in his garden & is now in Public Square or Park. Col. Francis K. Huger was the liberator of La Fayette from the dungeon of Olmutz. Major Gen. Seaborn bought Long House but never lived in it, sold to Gregg Richards. Burned supposedly by a negro woman who wanted to return to Charleston.

LORTON HOUSE - 181 East Queen, next door to Lowther Hall "Evans Place" - not same house. Site of first house in village - a log house & built by ?. Owned by Mrs. John S. Lorton who was Mrs. J. C. Kilpatrick nee Whitner, who afterward married Dr. Chas. Devant. Owned many years by E. C. Evans. Now remodeled & occupied by E. G. Evans, Jr.

LOWTHER HALL - East Queen Street, first house (residential) after stores on left hand side of street. Built by Lord Lowther as a hunting lodge - returned to England & died there. For years known as Trescot place. Various owners - Dr. Cuthbert, Mrs. Wm. Henry Trescott - later owned by J. V. Bostic (See Book M, p. 508, Anderson, C. H.). Now Roy Barrett.

MARSHALSEA (Female Academy) - 112 West Queen - Home of Mrs. W. W. Simmons. In 1919 she bought this brick house, which was built in 1822 for Pendleton Gaol (Jail), she named it Marshalsea (name of a prison formerly existing in Southwark London, abolished in 1849). The Marshalsea Prison is described in Charles Dickens "Little Dorrit". John Evans owns.

MAXWELL - Samuel Maxwell on Seneca River - Major Benj. Sloan, Roger Pinckney, right Maxwell Bridge Highway. House standing. Barns left side of road. Clemson lands.

MAXWELL - Robert Maxwell. Later owned by Riverside Cotton Mill. Owned first and built by John Sloan - Late years, Superintendents have lived there - Martin Warren, owned by Sid Cherry. Burned July 1952. Now owned by La France.

MCBRYDE, Rev. Thos. L. - 717 Greenville St. Nov. 1851 - April 1863 Hopewell-Pendleton Church. After his death, the manse was deeded to his widow.

MICASSA - 430 S. Mechanic. Built by Col. Dr. Stewart who came to Pendleton from Charleston. Dr. Stewart sold it, known as Friendly Villa, also as Micassa & Belvidere, also as Dunean. Mrs. J. C. Calhoun owned Micassa & lived there 1852 until her death 1866. The Clemsons lived there for a few years, Rev. Andrew Cornish, who sold it to Henry P. Sitton in 1889-1890 - and the name was changed to Belvidere & house remodeled & entrance changed from north to east. In 1916, S. E. Whitten purchased it & widow living there.

MT. JOLLY - Original house not standing - Clemson land now. Three miles east of Pendleton - Home of Zachariah Taliaferro, lawyer, who practiced law in Pendleton until 1826. Died in 1831 & buried in family grave-yard on his homestead - which he willed to his daughter Margaret Taliaferro who married Major E. F. Simpson.

MONT PELIOR - 4 miles on Rt. 88 ---- side of road - Riggins owns now. Owned & built by Samuel Maverick - came to Pendleton when it was first settled & became very wealthy & the largest land owner in the U. S. in his day. The house had some beautiful iron balconies & marble mantle pieces. His son, Samuel Augustus Maverick went to Texas when a Young man - invested in land & in his day was the largest land owner in the U.S. owning more land than his father. His son-in-law Wm. ADDED NOTES ON OLD PENDLETON

(The following notes were probably added by Historical Commission personnel when the basic material above was typed. Your editor suspects that they also added the question marks)

There seems to be some confusion where printer John Miller lived - who came from Charleston about 1789 - and started the first paper in the up-country. Two small houses in Pendleton Village were built by him (between Shackelfords (229 E. Queen) & house next toward town.). One house he occupied for a time, then moved into the country. These houses are stillstanding. 1 remodeled. One was occupied by one daughter, Mrs. Richard Wilson (House in rear of J. V. Bostic), one by Mrs. Charlotte Miller Kay (J. V. Bostick house - next to Shackelford house), Mrs. Elam Sharpe, then Burriss' (Shackelford House). Mrs. Elam Sharpe was daughter of Miller.

About 1800, the following families settled near Pendleton: Dr. Hall at Colin Campbell place, afterwards owned by W. M. Trescott & John Owen, now owned by Martin Grenshaw. Dr. Dart (Thomas) - at the place now owned by John S. Newton's family. Mrs. McGregor at the Eliot place near Dr. Dart. Ben Dupree - near Dr. Dart - known as Lorton Place & at one time owned by H. S. Trescot. Benj. Dupree, Jr. & his brother Cornelius P. built two houses on eastern part of Pendleton exactly alike. One of these houses directly back of St. Paul's Church was purchased by Church as rectory, purchased by F. C. Boggs & torn down?

Josiah E. Smith, one time Pres. of S. C. College came to Pendleton in 1850 & purchased tract of land upon which was located the Pendleton Manual Labor School, afterwards owned by Miss Caroline Taliaferro.

Rev. Thos. Reese, graduated from Princeton College in winter of 1768. 1792-93 he moved to Pendleton - one of the first to come from the low country & settled near Pendleton Village & took charge of Old Stone Church as first pastor. Died in 1796. Buried at Old Stone Church - the first person buried in churchyard, his grave was dug before the church was built.

The history of the churches of any community tells much about the residents and the life style of the time. Pendleton is no exception.

This is the first of what is hoped will be a series of brief histories of the early churches in what are now Anderson, Oconee and Pickens Counties of South Carolina. The articles will, of necessity, be limited to the earliest churches. Those which also have cemeteries are especially important to genealogists. These cemeteries together with the many early family cemeteries help to provide information on ancestors for the time when public records were scarce. It should be noted here that the Pendleton Chapter has published two volumes of Oconee cemetery records and one for Pickens. Another for Pickens will be out this year.

These articles must be quite brief but it is hoped that they will contain enough information to serve as a guide for further personal research.

Soon after the Treaty of Hopewell with the Cherokee Indians was signed in , settlers moved in and began organizing churches. In some cases, several churches had a close physical or religious relationship which makes their grouping logical. The four churches in this issue are a natural group of this kind. They are all in or near the village of Pendleton. The Presbyterians were first, followed soon by Episcopalians.

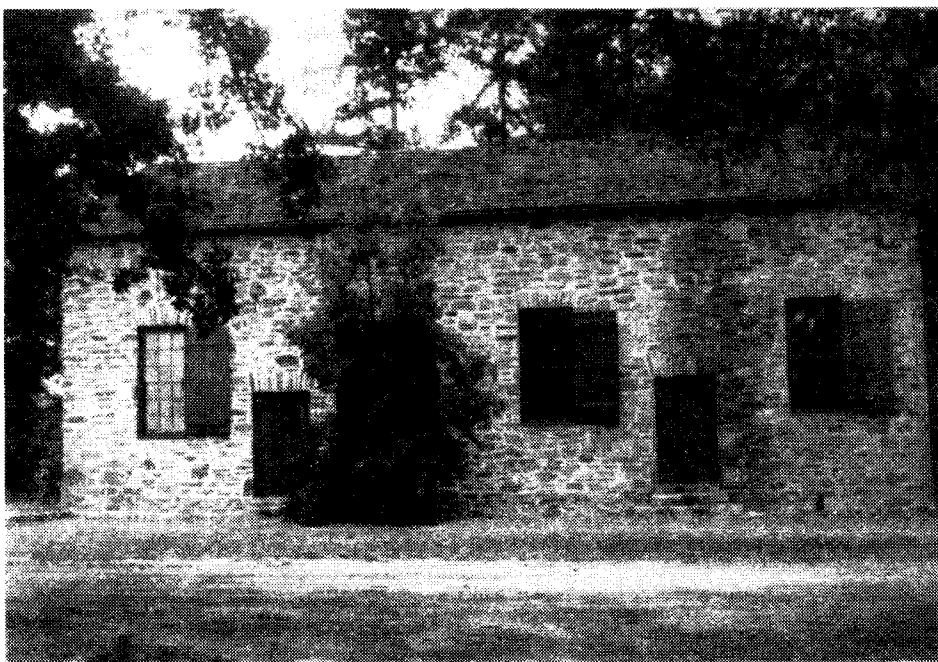

CARMEL PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

The church still exists and is located at SC135 and Carmel Church Road not far from the Pickens-Anderson County line.

Much of the settlement in the Up-Country around Pendleton was by Scotch-Irish from Pennsylvania and Virginia and they were Presbyterians.

Carmel was organized in 1787, only ten years after the treaty. There was apparently some Presbyterian activity even earlier. To quote J. P. Smith<sup>1</sup>: "At first, there seem to have been two preaching places, or mission stations; one situated about three miles east of this place (Carmel) and known as Twenty-three Mile Creek, or Pickens Church, and the other about three miles south of this place and called Richmond. In the minutes of the Presbytery, we find both these places petitioning to be supplied with preaching. We do not think there was a regular organization at these places, but we learn that ministers were appointed to preach at both places. Dr. Thomas Reese, who became pastor of the Carmel Church in the year 1792, says that Carmel was organized in 1787. But the name Carmel does not appear (says Dr. Howe) till around 1793 when it appears in the Minutes of the Presbytery, the names of Twenty-three Mile Creek and Richmond disappear, so it seems very probable that the two congregations, or preaching stations spoken of, merged into one, or unite and form one organization and take the name of Carmel. The first Carmel church building was about three miles east of the present building, and the old graveyard, where some of the founders of the

OLD STONE CHURCH

In 1893, Dr. Q. M. Doyle of Seneca, SC and Capt. J. Miles Pickens of Pendleton, SC met at Calhoun, SC. They noted the poor condition of the old building and the cemetery. This led to the organization of The Old Stone Church and Cemetery Improvement Association<sup>1</sup>.

On August 31, 1902, the Pendleton Church transferred "--- the care of Old Stone Church, grounds and cemetery with the power and the privilege of disposing of lots in the cemetery for burial purposes, renting the land suitable for cultivation and selling such timber as in their judgement needs being removed for the protection of the forest, land and property, PROVIDED, they must use all money from such sources toward improving and keeping in order the said church, grounds and cemetery, we reserving the right to cancel all the above if they fail to carry out the obligations -----." This arrangement continues to this day.

The Association was finally able to fully renovate the church building in 1962. The cemetery and building are now well kept thanks to the diligent efforts of the Association members.

The cemetery at Old Stone Church<sup>2</sup> is the last resting place of many early settlers including Gen. Andrew Pickens of Revolutionary War fame.

HOPEWELL PENDLETON (PENDLETON) PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

The church is located in the village of Pendleton.

PENDLETON PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

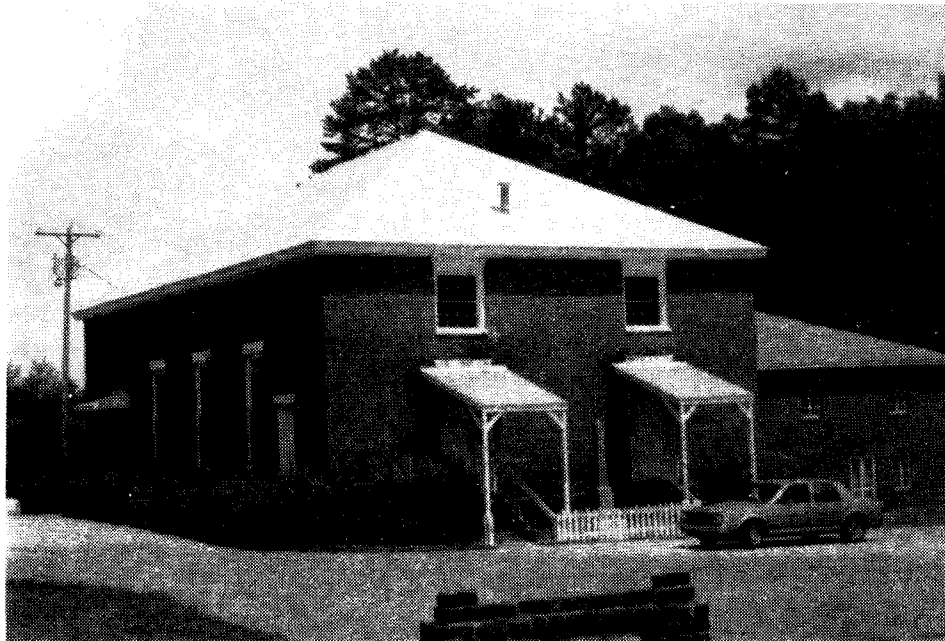

In 1824, the members built Hopewell-Pendleton, a frame building facing the old Greenville Road (now SC88) across from the present elementary school. It was used until 1893. It then became a mission for the black people; then sold and remodeled as a house. It burned 12 April 1950.

Quoting from Pendleton Presbyterian Church, 1789-1966<sup>1</sup>:
"At the time the frame church was built - finished in 1825 according to the Pendleton Messenger - the Reverend Anthony W. Ross was pastor; Josias D. Gaillard, Elam Sharpe, and John B. Hammond were elders. The membership was small. In 1826 and 1828, there were recorded fifty-nine members, some of whom were slaves."

The name Keowee was dropped in the mid 1800s and the church was listed as Hopewell-Pendleton. The separate history of the Old Stone Church seems to have closed about 1832 and Old Stone Church was used infrequently.

After Rev. Anthony W. Ross resigned in 1828, the Rev. Aaron Foster became full time pastor but did give some time to the Willington church. He resigned in 1832 at which time the membership had risen to sixty-eight.

In November 1832, Rev. Richard B. Cater from Abbeville Co. became pastor until 1836 when the communicants had been raised to two hundred nineteen. Rev. Anthony W. Ross then returned and served until he retired in 1851.

church are buried, is still preserved, and recently a new Methodist Church has been built on this very spot where old Carmel first stood. The church was removed to this place about 75 years ago (about 1814)."

The early ministers, Revs. Rob't Hall, W. C. Davis, -----Hunter, Thos. Reese, D.D., J. Simpson, J. Gilliland, A. Brown, B. Montgomery, Mas. McElhenny, -----Murphy, James Hillhouse, and W. W. Ross served, in the order named, as supply for not only Carmel but Hopewell-Keowee (Old Stone Church) from organization until 1836.

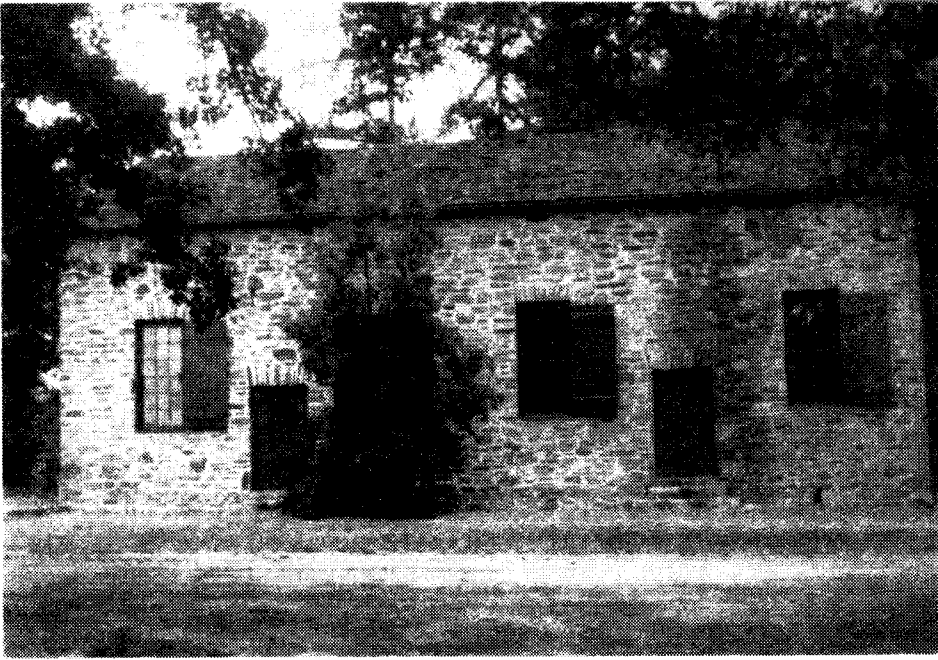

Later, the church was served by Revs. J. L. Kennedy, J. B. Adger, D.D., Hugh Mc Lees, A. P. Nicholson and J. R. Riley who was current pastor in 1889 when their 100th anniversary was celebrated.

The first elders of the church were: Thomas Hamilton (a soldier of the Revolution), John Hamilton, James Watson, John Wilson, and Robert McCann. Next came Wm. Rev. Ross was followed by Revs. Humphrys, Reid, Hillhouse and McBryde, the latter staying until 1863. These were followed by Dr. John Bailey Adger who came to Pendleton in 1852 and served as advisor and/or pastor for over 45 years. Other pastors were Revs. Hugh McLees and William Cuttino Smith.

In 1882, the "Hopewell" portion of the church name was dropped and the name became simply Pendleton Presbyterian Church.

In 1893, the present church was built and its cemetery established. No doubt, earlier burials of members were at Old Stone Church.

ST. PAUL'S EPISCOPAL CHURCH

St. Pauls is located in the village of Pendleton.

ST. PAUL'S EPISCOPAL CHURCH

The original settlement of the Pendleton area was almost exclusively by Scotch-Irish who were Presbyterian. But by 1800 the affluent people of "Low Country" South Carolina found Pendleton a welcome relief from the hot, "sickly season" and summer migrations began and lasted until the Civil War. Many of them built permanent homes here and stayed, others opened their homes only during the summer. Most of these were Anglicans and the need for an Episcopal church in an otherwise Presbyterian stronghold became apparent. In 1819, a missionary, the Rev. Rodolphus Dickinson began to serve Pendleton and Greenville.

On 13 May 1822, Col. Thomas Pinckney, Lt. Gov. of South Carolina, 1832-34 and Col. John E. Colhoun, in trust for St. Paul's Episcopal Church, purchased Outlot #7, comprising 1 3/10 acres, for $39. In later years, an additional 1 1/2 acres was purchased for enlargement of the churchyard<sup>1</sup>.

The church was ordered built April 1822 and was completed and consecrated November 23, 1823. Stairs lead from the vestibule to a balcony where slaves worshipped. The windows were patched with lead during the Civil War and never replaced. The original bell was sent to Macon, GA in the 1860s to be melted down for bullets and was replaced with one from the steamer Seabrook.

Among its members buried in the churchyard<sup>3</sup> are: Charles Cotesworth Pinckney, Lieut. Gov., 1832-34; Dr. Thomas Lynch Dart, one of the four original vestrymen; Gen. Barnard E. Bee; Gen. Clement H. Stevens; Mrs. John C. Calhoun, widow of the statesman; Thomas G. Clemson, founder of Clemson University; Rev. Jasper Adams, founder and first President of Hobart College, Geneva, N. Y.; and William Henry Trescot, diplomat - historian.

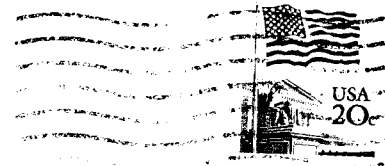

The church and cemetery are now under the care of Trinity Episcopal Church of Clemson, SC since becoming dormant in 1966. Services are held there occasionally.
