GAMBRELL: A letter written 4 July 1927 from H.D. Ward of Houston Texas states: Two Grambrell Brothers came from France about 1676 (but first took refuge in Ireland and from Ireland to America) went up the Potomac and settled in Virginia and Maryland, later they had a misunderstanding and broke friendship. John Grambrell of Anderson Co SC was a grandson of one of these two brothers (from J.B. Gambrell who was the grandson of David Grambrell and his parents moved from Anderson Co SC to Tippah Co MISS in 1842). The old Grambrell Graveyard is near Manassa and Williamsburg VA.

From H.D. Ward taken from material that she has been writing down for over 40 years told to her by her father and grandfather: John Grambell a grandson of one of these brothers settled in Anderson Co SC some time before the Rev. War. He married Barbary Bruton a descendant of a French family. To John and Barbary was born 5 sons: Henry, David, James, John and Matthew, one of these 5 brothers was a one-legged old batchelor because he lost his leg in the War of 1812, his wound was a constant irritant to his temper so he drank to excess. You can see that John Grambrell Rev. Soldier was the grandfather of my father and Uncle Madison. He was also great-grandfather of J.B. Gambrell. My grandfather was Matthew Gambrell (son of John) he was a Baptist preacher and died a suicide on 12 Aug 1843 he married Lettice Madison d/o James Madison. Matthew Gambrell lived on his fathers home place. My father and uncle Madison are the only sons of Matthew Gambrell to survive the Civil War. My father left Painesville AL and moved to TX in 1857. I believe that Daniel Gambrell was the grand-father of John Gambrell

NOTE: by Linda Cheek--I believe that John Gambrell married Barbary Vaughn and that her (Barbary Vaughn's) mother was Barbary Bruton\Brewton m. William Vaughn. Sure would like to have this proof.

John Gambrell d. Sept 1834 Anderson District SC m. Barbary Bruton (Vaughn) a descendant of a French family early settlers in VA for whom the Bruton Memorial Chapel at Williamsburg is named. John Gambrell was in the Rev with Marion, he was a Scout because he had a stiff arm and could not fight.

John Gambrell left will at Anderson Co SC dated 10 May (March) 1830 proven 27 Sept 1834 naming: Wife Barbara Gambrell children: William Gambrell, Henry Gambrell and wife Susannah, John Gambrell, James Gambrell, David Gambrell, Matthew Gambrell, Elizabeth Cox, Nancy Breazeal (Enoch). My other children. Exors: John Gambrell and Matthew Gambrell sons. Sg: John Gambrell X. Wit: Sam I. Hammond, Elijah Griffin, Barbara Casey. ## Diaries of Ida Virginia Bradley 1879-1889

The diaries of Ida Virginia Bradley, written between 1879-1889, begin with a description of an eighteen-year-old girl's solitary journey from her impoverished home in Cartersville, Georgia to Pickens, South Carolina, to live in the home of her more affluent uncle, David Franklin Bradley. Uncle Frank and Aunt Mary, who have no children of their own, treat her as a beloved daughter—companion. Ida is expected to assist with the housekeeping chores, sewing and other types of handiwork, and entertaining guests. Infrequently, she also performs secretarial duties in the printing office of the Pickens Sentinel, which Uncle Frank founded and continues to edit. A nephew, Milt, who lives with the Bradleys and is treated as a son, works in the printing and newspaper office.

Uncle Frank, a Civil War veteran and South Carolina senator, periodically goes to Columbia to “pass a bill,” such as that of prohibition mentioned in Ida's January 24, 1880 entry. She refers in the January 30 and subsequent entries to his efforts to bring the railroad to Pickens.

Ida's Cartersville intervals reflect a great deal more home chores and responsibilities. Her family (Civil War veteran father, mother, nine children, and maternal grandmother at times) are close-knit and devoted, but ever struggling to survive financially.

The last entry in Ida Virginia Bradley's diaries was made in July, 1889. Two years later, when she was thirty years old, she married Aunt Mary's nephew, Charles Hovey Clyde of Easley, South Carolina.

Hubbard Garmany. Garmany had been arrested for violation of the internal revenue laws and placed in the Greenville jail. He managed to break out and presumably returned to his farm some fifteen miles north of Greenville. W F Gray and Hendricks, acting in capacity of U S Marshals, went to arrest and return him back to jail. Hendricks apparently advanced on Garmany, shooting at him twice and saying, 'damn you, I will take you or kill you.' This Hendricks did even though Garmany was holding his child in his arms at the time and the child crying, 'don't shoot pa.' Garmany returned one shot which killed Hendricks almost instantly. Hendricks was buried on the family homestead near Liberty.

During the July term of court, Garmany was tried and acquitted on the grounds that it was done in self defense.

REVENUER RAIDS ON CITIZENS

The revenuer raids on citizen's homes began with violence in the case of Mr J M Porter. In March 1877 a party of revenueurs entered began a search of his dwelling. Mr Porter, a respected citizen of the county, objected to this "high handed outrage" and demanded their authority for searching his premises. "They fell upon him and beat him severely with pistols. One of them attempted to shoot him crying, 'Kill him, d--n him, kill him!' All because he demanded some authority shown to him." They then arrested Mr Porter on charges of resisting an officer in the course of performing his duty. On appearing in court the charges were quickly dismissed after it was made know that their were no warrants for his arrest or to search his home.

For this outrage he had the officials arrested for assault and battery on a state warrant. Before the next session of court, writs of habeas corpus were issued by the United States court thus transferring the case to that court. They were immediately released and a year later the case was 'still sleeping' there.

Along about the last of April 1877. revenue officers

Barton, Gary and others visited the Little Eastatoe community where they enlisted Alfred McCrary to guide them through the mountains. Whether he volunteered or was compelled to go was questionable. The purpose, of course, was to find violators of the revenue laws and the 'habitation of the notorious Redmond.' He went along with the revenue officials on their hunt, but if they found any stills or made any raids, none were reported in the papers.

On 25 May 1877 McCrary was hoeing in his field while his little son was plowing the same field. From the woods came the report of a rifle and McCrary reeled and fell, dying in a few minutes from a ball through the lungs. The murderer kept himself securely under cover of the woods and made his escape.

The commentary included in the PICKENS SENTINEL 30 May 1877 report of the murder expressed distain for the killing as well as the recruitment of citizens by revenue officials. ".... whether Mr McCrary acted voluntarily in this matter or by compulsion, grievously has he paid the penalty with his life. Such acts of violence and reckless disregard of human life are ever to be deplored,...all good citizens should make every effort to bring to condign punishment the perpetrator of this foul murder. We think that revenue officers should not press in citizens to perform a work which they are paid to do." No one was ever charged with the crime.

Also in April and May 1877, a widow lady and her son had their own encounter with these revenue officers. Mrs Mary A Hinkle and her son Silas Hinkle Jr lived some twenty miles northwest of Pickens. On April fifteenth Silas was returning home from the fields for dinner. He heard shouts of 'Halt!' and turned to see three men coming across the field. He didn't stop and they fired three shots. two he heard pass over his head. After the second shot he began to run with the men chasing him for about a half mile before letting him go on. Silas recognized the men as revenue officers. He had even talked with them some days later, but they made no attempt to arrest him.

Almost a month later on the eleventh of May, Mrs Hinkle saw about twenty-five men riding up the road towards and then past her home. They stopped some three hundred yards up the road then turned back. Wm Gary, E H Barton and John Scruggs were among the group and they proceeded to enter her home and search it. Barton went through her trunk then joined Gary in searching the whole house as well as the smokehouse. They found two double and one single barrelled shotguns which they took outside but returned them shortly. Barton stood in the house cursing and swearing about the guns and told Mrs Hinkle 'to tell Redmond they had been to see him and hoped he would call on them again.' Silas and his brother returned a couple of hours after they had left and their mother told what had happened. They examined the guns and found them 'bent and broken and rendered utterly unfit for use.'

Not one to be treated such, Mrs Hinkle went to Sheriff Joab Mauldin and Commissioner Thornely who issued a warrant against Barton and Gary along with another revenue official named Springs. At the preliminary hearing in July 1877, the widow describe the events that happened in her home and deputy collector Scruggs corroborated with his testimony. Barton and Gary were bound over for the August term for trial. Scruggs stated the Springs was not part of the raid and was discharged.

Revenue officers were not only in search of illicit whiskey, tobacco products required excise stamps and there seemed to be a law on the number of tobacco plants a farmer could grow. Neither was Pickens County the only county to suffer the 'wrath of revenuers.'

A reprint from the ANDERSON INTELLIGENER appeared in the 30 August issue of the PICKENS SENTINEL. "It is rumored
