(2) Page 150: Thomas Garvin had 1 male under 10, 2 males 16 to 25, 1 male 26 to 44, 1 female under 10, 1 female 16 to 25.

1812, 1813, & 1814: The name of Thomas Garrin was on a list of land entries in Fayette County, Indiana, Township 13, North Range 13, East: Section 21: sold to John Morrow, Elia Lee, William Adams and Thomas Garrin. [Barrows, History of Fayette County, IN]

This is about the time we think Thomas left Pendleton District with four of his daughters and their husbands: (1) Jane and her husband John Morrow, (2) Martha and her husband Archibald Morrow, (3) Mary and her husband Samuel Watters, and (4) Hannah with her husband Joseph Glenn. Archibald Morrow shows up on the same list of Fayette County, Indiana Land Entries as Thomas Garrin & John Morrow. He was in section 28.

The following paragraph is an excerpt from a letter was written to Mrs. Frank Ayers (Lucy Elizabeth Blackerby), Piedmont, SC 19 Feb. 1950 by Mabelle Morrow, 917 Prospect Rd., Peoria 4, Illinois:

"Jane Garvin married John Morrow in Anderson Co. S. C. John Morrow had a twin brother who married Martha Garvin, a sister of Mary and Jane. Jane, Mary, and Martha were sisters of your great great grandfather, Thomas Garvin, married Sarah Johnson. The Morrow brothers, the Watters family and another sister, Hannah (Garvin) Glenn and family, migrated from S. C. to Fayette Co. eastern Indiana about 1812. The Glenn family a few years later settled in Franklin Co. Ind. just south of Fayette Co. and died there. The Morrrows and Watters families went to Parke Co. Ind. where Archibald Morrow died. Samuel Watters died in Fayette Co. Ind. and the widow and children went to Parke Co. In 1832 John Morrow came to Peoria Co. Ill. He died here about 1836; I cannot find the exact date of death. His widow, Jane (Garvin) Morrow went in 1839 to what is now Vernon Co. Missouri with her son John Jr. and her daughter, Elizabeth (Morrow) Prince and family. Jane (Garvin) Morrow died there Nov. 4, 1844. Mary (Garvin) Watters died in Washington Co. Iowa Apr. 24, 1848. Martha (Garvin) Morrow died near Princeville, Peoria Co. Ill. Feb. 27, 1852. Hannah (Garvin) Glenn died May 24, 1855."

1820 Census of Vigo County, Indiana: The household of John Morrow has 2 males under 10, 2 males 10 – 15, 1 male 16 – 25, 1 male 26 – 44, 1 male over 45; 2 females 10 – 15, 1 female over 45.

According to my information John Morrow was born about 1779 and his wife Jane Garvin was born about 1780. If the above household is the correct one for John and Jane Morrow, then Jane has been enumerated in the wrong column. I believe the male over 45 was Thomas Garvin, Sr.

[York County, SC Deed Book K, p. 61]

1826: Believed to be the year Thomas Garvin, Sr. died at the home of John Morrow in Parke County, Indiana. On 2 May 1950, Maybelle Morrow writes a letter to an Uncle seeking corroboration for a record she has that purported came from the Garvin Bible. This record says he was born in 1736 and died in 1826.

Confederate Veteran

James Alfred Hoyt

PART TWO

In spite of having received four battle wounds during the American Civil War, Confederate veteran James Alfred Hoyt was able to live an active and productive life for an additional thirty-nine years. He was paroled by the Federal government in 1865, after he had continued to publish The Anderson Intelligencer in Anderson, South Carolina, which he issued for an additional eighteen years. In 1870 Hoyt was a candidate for a seat in the South Carolina Senate, but he lost the election by a margin of 200 votes.

In 1872 Hoyt, an accomplished journalist, accompanied William King Easley (1825-1872) on the attorney's business trip to Atlanta to attend a meeting with officials of the Air Line Railroad. That company was then laying train tracks through the southern breadth of Pickens County.

JAMES A HOYT, A

CONFEDERATE VETERAN AND JOURNALIST
PURCHASED THIS RELIGIOUS NEWSPAPER IN 1878
AND MOVED IT THE FOLLOWING YEAR FROM COLUMBIA TO GREENVILLE, WHERE IT HAS BEEN PUBLISHED FOR THE PAST 162 YEARS. (IN 1920
THE SOUTH CAROLINA BAPTIST CONVENTION
PURCHASED THE COURIER AND ALSO CONTINUED TO ISSUE IT IN GREENVILLE.)

One day following the party's arrival in Atlanta, Mr. Easley became seriously ill and died at the age of forty-seven. James A. Hoyt was the first newshound to telegraph the tragic report of the attorney's untimely death to newspapers back in South Carolina. Easley had served as a Confederate soldier, who—as a captain—commanded Company A of the 4th South Carolina Cavalry. Many troopers from eastern Pickens District served in that command. The deceased Confederate veteran and attorney was a signer of the state's Ordinance of Secession in 1860, having been elected as one of Greenville's delegates to the Secession Convention. A native of eastern Pickens District and the owner of a large plantation on the west bank of the Saluda River, Easley had a law office in Greenville, where he also maintained a second home. He was appointed the state's first adjutant general after the Civil War. The town of Easley in Pickens County was named in honor of General Easley.

As a fervent and very active member of the Democratic Party, Hoyt disparaged and opposed many of the Federal government's post-war Reconstruction measures implemented before 1877, when Northern occupation troops were withdrawn from the state. He also stood up against the 1872 gubernatorial election campaign of Sumter native Franklin Israel Moses (1838-1906), who was widely considered to have been a scalawag. Moses had joined the radical Republicans after the Civil War in an apparent attempt to pursue an opportunistic quest for private gain during the state's period of political and economic instability. Nonetheless, radicals were in control of state government, and they helped to ensconce Moses in the governor's office where he served from 1872 until 1874. He was a corrupt politician who turned state's evidence against other dishonest public officials, thereby warding off his own possible conviction for criminal acts. After Moses' sordid term in office, the unscrupulous ex-public official slipped into obscurity.

In 1873 Hoyt's father, Jonathan Perkins Hoyt, passes away at the home of John L. Gilkerson, who resided near Tumbling Shoals in Laurens County. His body was interred at the First Baptist Church in Anderson, South Carolina.

Confederate veteran Hoyt was an active member of the American Free Masons, a secret fraternal order that once enjoyed tremendous popularity in the nation. Hoyt served as the grand master of the South Carolina grand Masonic lodge, having succeeded former Confederate General Joseph Brevard Kershaw (1872-1894) in the same position. Kershaw was a native of Camden, South Carolina, and he had commanded a brigade in the Army of Northern Virginia, as well as in the Tennessee campaign. In 1875 Hoyt conducted Masonic rites at the funeral of Anderson County native James Madison McFall (27 Jul 1843 – 20 Mar 1875), a son of John McFall (1799-1864) and Elizabeth (Todd) McFall (1805-1874). During the Civil War, the McFall's son had served to the rank of captain in the Palmetto Sharpshooters. He had also been a member of Company B (Palmetto Rifleman), 4th South Carolina Regiment of Volunteers. After the Civil War, former Captain McFall moved to Pickens, South Carolina where he became a successful and prominent businessman. But he died of tuberculosis at the age of thirty-two and was buried at Anderson's First Baptist Church. McFall was survived by his wife, Mildred

Lindsay (Robinson) McFall (1841-1891), and five young children. The following brothers of the deceased veteran also fought in the Civil War: Waddy Thompson McFall, William Cadow McFall and Andrew McFall.

During the state's 1874 gubernatorial election, Hoyt voted against candidate Daniel Henry Chamberlain (1835-1907), a Massachusetts native who had moved to South Carolina after the Civil War. He was regarded by most Democrats (including Hoyt) as just another Northern carpetbagger. Chamberlain was an educated Republican candidate for public office; he had earned degrees from both Yale and Harvard Law School. In spite of some Democratic opposition, Chamberlain won the election and then served as governor in 1874-1876. As a well-qualified governor, he performed his duties as best he could but failed to curb the prevailing excesses and rampant corruption of other elected officials. Upon the completion of his duties as governor, Chamberlain moved back to the North where he practiced law in New York.

Hoyt supported Wade Hampton (1818-1902) during the former Confederate general's 1876 bid for election to the governorship of South Carolina. After some stringent Reconstruction measures had been initiated in the state, Hampton decided to come out of retirement to resist radical Republican rule. Most of all, he aspired to restore white supremacy in the state and to prevent outbreaks of violence between rival political factions. Hampton's election campaign was initiated at a political rally in Anderson. James A. Hoyt was chairman of the county's Democratic Party, and he presided at some of the rally's events. "Red Shirt" Supporters of Hampton were also very much in view at that rally. Hampton was soon elected governor, and he served from 1876 until 1879, having been re-elected for a second term in 1878.

In 1877 Hoyt was named editor of The Columbia Daily Register, a position he held for only about one year. He then purchased the weekly Baptist Courier from Charles McJunkin in 1878. Earlier the religious newspaper had been issued briefly in Columbia by McJunkin, who had moved it from Charleston. (In the Courier's early years, the paper was owned and issued by private individuals, most of whom were Baptist clergymen. Even so, the paper was sanctioned by the South Carolina Baptist Convention, which did not take it under its wings until 1920.) As the Courier's new proprietor, Hoyt moved the weekly religious newspaper from Columbia to Greenville in 1879. He then established an office and print shop on West Washington Street in the city. The decision to move the newspaper from Columbia to Greenville was indubitably made because the Greenville area was then—and still is—a Baptist stronghold. Moreover, two of the Baptist denomination's higher education institutions, namely Greenville Female College and Furman University, had already been established there. (The former listed institution was later merged into the latter one).

As the new editor and publisher of The Baptist Courier, Hoyt solicited articles from many Baptist lay persons and clergymen, including Dr. James Clement Furman (1809-1891), the former president of Furman University, who had served in that position from 1852 until 1879. Writers of articles published by the Courier were often described as "associate editors". Hoyt's wife, Rebecca Caroline, contributed many interesting articles for the "Hearth and Home" section of the paper, and she continued to write them for thirty-three more years, including the periods during which The Baptist Courier was owned and issued by persons other than her husband. In addition, the Hoyt's daughter Lucy wrote numerous articles and special features of interest to children.

Some sermons delivered by Baptist clergymen were printed in the paper. Hoyt also wrote editorials. For example, he stressed the need for a Baptist orphanage, advocated more support for Furman University and promoted additional worthy causes. Advertisements were also accepted for publication by Hoyt, especially those focusing on patent medicines, buggies available for sale and various health-care products. Bible studies were also included in the Courier, many having been prepared by contributing Baptist ministers from over the state. Hoyt was the first experienced newspaperman to have edited and issued The Baptist Courier. He is also believed to have been the only Baptist layperson who published the newspaper during its first forty years. Subscriptions for The Courier were sold by Hoyt at a cost of two dollars per year for forty-eight weekly issues. Free bibles were sometimes given for new subscriptions.

In 1882 Hoyt was joined at his office and printing press by William W. "Willie" Keys (1855-1910), an experienced printer who once worked at The Anderson Intelligencer in Anderson. Keys also purchased half interest in The Courier, and he became a very active and helpful business partner in the paper's publication. In 1891, Hoyt sold his half interest in the religious newspaper to the Reverend A. J. S. Thomas (1852-1911) of Orangeburg, South Carolina, and that clergyman moved to Greenville where he continued to publish the paper. He was assisted by "Willie" Keys, owner of the other half of the paper's stock. Then, when the Reverend Thomas passed away in 1911, the Reverend Zeckariah Thornton Cody (1858-1935), pastor of Greenville's First Baptist Church, became co-owner of the Courier, along with James Crawford ("J. C.") Keys (1882-1935), who had inherited half interest in the Courier from his father "Willie" Keys. (Sometime later, Keys established Keys Printing Company in Greenville).

Hoyt was president of the South Carolina Baptist Convention from 1885 until 1892. In 1891 he became financial agent of Furman University, but left that position because of the extensive travel it entailed. Then he edited The Mountaineer newspaper in Greenville until 1904.

In 1890 Nellie Hoyt (1868-1957), daughter of James A. and Rebecca Caroline Hoyt, married Alester Garden Furman (1867-1962), a fourth-generation descendant of Richard Furman (1755-1825), the leading and most prominent Baptist clergyman of the South during the last decades of the eighteenth century and the early ones of the nineteenth. Richard Furman became the namesake of Furman University. Nellie (Hoyt) Furman's husband was a son of Charles Manning Furman (b.1840) and Frances (Richardson) Furman. He was also a grandson of James Clement Furman, D. D. (1809-1891), the first president of Furman University. Alester Garden Furman graduated from the same university in 1885, after which he became a Greenville businessman and founder of the "Furman Company". In addition, he was a civic leader who promoted—among many other worthy causes—the development of electric power for textile

FURMAN UNIVERSITY

Furman University is the oldest, largest and most selective private institution of higher education in South Carolina. Founded in 1826, Furman moved three times in its early years before being chartered as Furman University and settling in downtown Greenville in 1850.

During the 2008-09 school year Furman is celebrating the 50th anniversary of its move from its original Greenville site to its current location five miles north of the city. The move to the stunning 750-acre campus served as a catalyst for the university's ongoing transformation from a primarily regional college to one of the leading liberal arts institutions in the United States.

Today Furman offers majors and programs in more than 40 areas and is one of the select group of colleges that qualify for a chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, the nation's most prestigious academic honorary society. Its 2,630 undergraduates come from nearly every state in the union and more than 20 countries, and more than 95 percent of the full-time faculty hold doctorates or other terminal degrees in their fields.

In recent years Furman has been an exemplar of a new type of liberal arts institution. While still grounded in the humanities, arts and sciences, the university has earned a national reputation for its program of engaged learning, a problem-solving, project-oriented, experience-based approach to the liberal arts. Engaged learning encourages students to develop creative ways to put classroom theory into practice and to take a more active role in their education through internships, service learning, study away and research.

Baptist clergyman/educator; born in Charleston, S.C.; graduated from College of Charleston; received D.D. degree from same college later; president of Furman University 1852-1879; married Harriet E. Davis in 1833; buried in Springwood Cemetery, Greenville, S.C.

industries of the city and county. He also became a strong supporter and benefactor of Furman University. Mr. and Mrs. Furman had four children, including Alester Garden Furman II.

From 1885 until 1892, Hoyt served as president of the South Carolina Baptist Convention. In 1900 Hoyt received the nomination of the South Carolina Prohibition Convention as a candidate for governor of the state. He was an ideal prohibition candidate. Hoyt was a devout Baptist and a teetotaler, who had never tasted alcohol and also prevented the serving of wine in his home. Of course, the Prohibition Party's single-issue focus immaterialized the question of whether Hoyt was elected governor.

During the summer of 1881, Dr. James Clement Furman, president of Furman University, solicited pledges to help relieve the institution's need for more money for operating expenses. He was assisted in that endeavor by Mr. Hoyt and the Reverend J. L. Vass (1840-1906). The solicitation was successful, and funds were obtained from the Greenville, Spartanburg and Saluda associations. Hoyt was a longtime trustee and supporter of Furman University, and he was successful in an effort to obtain $7,500 from the American Baptist Education Society, after which he was thanked profusely by all the institution's trustees.

James A. Hoyt died at his Greenville home on Academy Street on May 27, 1904. His funeral was held May 29, 1904, at the city's First Baptist Church. It was conducted by the Reverend A. J. S. Thomas, D. D., editor of The Baptist Courier, and the Reverend Z. T. Cody, who served later as the Courier's editor. Mr. Hoyt's body was interred in the Furman-Hoyt plot at Greenville's Springwood Cemetery, where his wife was also laid to rest in 1925.

In conclusion a few comments are in order about misconceptions concerning James A. Hoyt's rank as a Confederate soldier during the Civil War. In some published newspaper articles and in at least one book, Hoyt was referred to as a "colonel" who had commanded a regiment and who had earned his rank on the battlefield. But in official Confederate military records and in other reliable sources Hoyt's highest service rank is listed as first lieutenant, the one he held in 1864 when discharged from the army because of a disabling battle wound received at Staunton River Bridge in Virginia. Apparently, the erroneous claim concerning the soldier's rank originated in J. C. Garlington's book titled Men of the Time, published in 1902 by Garlington Publishing Company in Spartanburg, South Carolina. The following sentence is contained on page 213 of the book: "Colonel Hoyt rose from the ranks as a private to become colonel of his regiment, his promotion being 'for gallant and meritorious conduct on the field'". Without a doubt, Lieutenant Hoyt was a gallant soldier who meritoriously engaged the enemy in combat, but he was never an army colonel, nor did he ever command a regiment. ■

Ken Nabors, President of Pickens County Historical Society, gave an interesting history lesson to members and guests at the June meeting. His topic was the 150th Anniversary of South Carolina's succession from the United States of America. He brought a large framed copy of the Ordinance of Secession and spoke about the history leading up to the signing, as well as information on many of those who signed it, including those from the Upstate area. Nabors is also the current Adjutant and past Commander of the Sons of Confederate Veterans, Camp 7 and has 20 years experience in living history reenactment groups.
