About Our Chapter

The Old Pendleton District Chapter of the South Carolina Genealogical Society is a nonprofit, 12-36-2120(40), educational organization designed to unite those interested in the Pickens and Oconee Counties, South Carolina history and family genealogy; to encourage the preservation of documents and records; to promote educational programs; and to publish local records, history and family genealogy. January 4, 1868, p. 2. Col. J.R. Edie, our new post commander and who was formerly stationed at Salisbury, NC, is thus spoken of by the "Old North Station," published at that place: "Just and impartial in the discharge of his duties, his conduct as commander of the post at this place has met with the general approbation of all parties." We hope, however, that the duties of Col. Edie will be light, assured as we are, that the people of this section, knowing well their duty, will perform it, without recourse to the military authorities.

January 4, 1868, p. 2. Pickens Female Seminary. This institution will be opened on the first Monday in February next, at Walhalla, under the care and superintendence of first class teachers.

January 4, 1868, p. 2. The State Convention. The Charleston Courier [newspaper] learns from a reliable source, that the total official returns give a majority of a little over 8,000 for a Convention, and that General Canby, in a day or two, will issue his order for the assembling of a State Convention in that city, on the 24th of January next.

January 4, 1868, p. 2. Decisions of the Court of Errors. The Greenville Enterprise [newspaper] learns from a distinguished member of the bar, who was in attendance upon the Court, that the following legal principles were decided by the Court of Errors during its recent sitting in Columbia.

1. The Statute of Limitations was suspended by the Stay Law in South Carolina.
2. The ordinance of the Convention allowing parties to prove what was the consideration and value of all contracts, during the war, is not in violation of the United States Constitution, nor does it impair the obligation of contracts.
3. It is not in violation of the Constitution of the United States for the District Courts to try criminals without a presentment of a Grand Jury.
4. The Tax Collectors are not compelled to receive the bills of the Bank of South Carolina in payment of taxes.
5. That slavery was not abolished at the date of President Lincoln's Proclamation, but ceased to exist when the State was captured.
6. Express Companies are liable to be taxed on their income.

7. The tax on National Banks, and the validity of Negro debts, were postponed. The Court decided that the Columbia and Augusta Railroad might cross the South Carolina Railroad in Columbia. But the case was retained for a compromise between the two companies in regard to the crossing and other matters. The question of the validity and constitutionality of the organization of the juries under Military Orders was argued in the Court of Appeals, but no decision has yet been announced.

Number of paupers in Poor House is 20, 17 whites and 3 colored. Three deaths – 2 whites and 1 colored

Two lunatics at the asylum, one at home, who will probably soon have to be remanded to Columbia. The latter was brought home by the advice of the Superintendent, who considered her convalescent, and thought that the presence of her family and friends, of whom she often spoke, might restore her to perfect sanity. It is understood, however, that after a trial of several months, she is at this time in no better condition than when she left the institution.

Principal indebtedness for support of pauper lunatics amounts to something over $700.

That is sufficient of corn and nearly enough of meat, have been produced on the farm.

The clothing of the paupers is also made on the premises.

Buildings at the Poor House are in good condition and a double-cabin has been erected for colored Paupers.

James Mansel Ferguson
The Old Ferguson Home in Pickens County
Foot of Glassy Mountain – Near the County Line to Greenville
Typed by G. Anne Sheriff

Over in Pickens County where the Blue Ridge skirts South Carolina and has already broken into foothills, not far from Highway #29, there nestles an old gray farm house, facing south. There are great oaks at the picket gate, from which the wide sandy walk was laid at intervals with steps of stone, and five great granite slabs form the flight of steps leading to the square portals of the wide vine-clad porch.

On each side of the walk, there once were boxwood, lilacs and myrtle, Spanish bayonet, narcissus, white and purple iris, in fact almost every growing plant know 150 years ago, for it was considered nothing to drive 20 miles for some new plant or another old shrub not in that beloved old-fashioned garden.

Walking across the wide porch upheld by large pillars one entered the so-called “big room” as large as all the rest of the downstairs, and the great comfortable fireplace flanked on either side by windows. Two small bedrooms opened from the opposite wall and another of same sized opened from the porch. The dining room and pantry ran clear across the back alongside the back porch. There was one large room upstairs. The interior was sealed with plank stained walnut.

The massive furniture, such as cupboards, four posters and dressers, were of foreign make, the others were made at home by the slaves from walnut trees that grew on the farm. Some of these became very skilled workmen and their work is exhibited with real pride unto this day.

Mr. Ferguson owned Glassy Mountain and about 2,000 acres of land; he scarcely knew his boundaries and much land was uncultivated. Image a man of 5 feet 10 inches tall, slim and athletic figure, erect and vigorous, with cold-blue eyes, very direct, deliberate in every movement and a manner which gave confidence, such a man was Mr. Ferguson, “The Judge” as the Negroes still called him, for they gave it to honor him, not as a title.

But Mr. Ferguson was more, he was a man of simple faith and absolute uprightness of character, very determined as to right and wrong, inclined to independence of thought, with a very philosophic mind. He read every word of his three weekly papers, the Pickens Sentinel, the Baptist Courier and the Atlanta Constitution. And his granddaughter who gave this from her uncle’s pen, adds – “I know he was never vexed with me. I never saw him vexed with anyone or out of patience.”

There was very little money on the farm and money was about the only thing which there was not an abundance. But often he sent a wagon load of provisions to a needy family in or beyond the mountains. One small room, more like a large closet, has not yet been mentioned, this was the wine room on the front porch. There were always good wines in it, and the “old Marster” knew good wine, but he was not a drinker, he may have had his little wine glass before each meal, but as for drinking, no, at in his home!

One of the great celebrations was the “corn shucking”, when the few neighbors would come over and all of the Negroes on the farm, the visiting friends would bring sometimes five or six men and women to help in the great shucking, for there was the great pile of corn, some 50 or 60 feet long, all waiting for the signal to begin.

Then when all was finished, Uncle Gabriel again sounded his horn and the great feast was served to all. Old Hannah and Big Hannah serving the colored people and it was a great time of joy, for when supper was over, all of the Negroes danced in “Massas yard” until a late hour when all the Negroes would go to make their curtesy and say good night to “old Massa” and “old Miss”, as only plantation Negroes could.

And this happy picture gives a glimpse of the old slaves who were so happy for “Massa” took care of them fed them and clothed them.

Written by S.R. Burgess from Greenville, SC on July 17, 1936.

Department of Veterans Affairs Nationwide Gravesite Locator

The site contains listing for all burials at most of the Veterans Affairs' national cemeteries. Arlington National Cemetery's records in the database contain only those burials after 1999. Search for burial locations of veterans and their family members in VA National Cemeteries, state veterans cemeteries, various other military and Department of Interior cemeteries, and for veterans buried in private cemeteries when the grave is marked with a government grave marker. The Nationwide Gravesite Locator includes burial records from many sources. These sources provide varied data; some searches may contain less information than others. Information on veterans buried in private cemeteries was collected for the purpose of furnishing government grave markers, and we do not have information available for burials prior to 1997. The Arlington National Cemetery provides information on service members buried there. The American Battle Monuments Commission provides information on service members buried in overseas cemeteries.

United States Geological Survey

The U.S. Geological Survey (USGS) National Geospatial Program is scanning published USGS 1:250,000-scale and larger topographic maps printed between 1884, the inception of the topographic mapping program, and 2006. The goal of this project, which began publishing the historical scanned maps in 2011, is to provide a digital repository of USGS topographic maps, available to the public at no cost. For more than 125 years, USGS topographic maps have accurately portrayed the complex geography of the Nation. The USGS is the Nation's largest producer of printed topographic maps, and prior to 2006, USGS topographic maps were created using traditional cartographic methods and printed using a lithographic printing process. As the USGS continues the release of a new generation of topographic maps (US Topo) in electronic form, the topographic map remains an indispensable tool for government, science, industry, land management planning, and leisure.
