CARPENTER WRITES OF OLD ANTIOCH AND HER MEMBERS
Historic Institution Has Known Many Noted
Early Leaders in State

By C. H. CARPENTER

Fifty-five years ago I brought my letter to Antioch. Doubtless you think that a long time in the past, and yet even then Antioch was 81 years old. In order that you may get a better idea of its age, just bear in mind that when the first Methodist church was built in the town of Greenville, Antioch had been built more than 40 years. She was the first Methodist church built in the Piedmont section--the section that had been the past possession of the Indians in South Carolina and it was in this region that, only 19 years before, the Cherokees fought their last battle for the possession of their homes.

A WILDERNESS

At this time of course very little of the land was cleared the greater part being in forests; but you will be surprised to read the descriptions of these forests that have been handed down to us--pictures given by the Indian traders, and by the adventurous travelers who visited this Piedmont section. They tell us:

IN THOSE DAYS

That the wood lands were carpeted with grass and the wild pea vine, growing as high as a horse's back, and wild flowers of every hue the constant admiration of the traveler and adventurous pioneer. The forests of those early times were far more imposing than any we now find."

"The trees were larger and stood so wide apart that a deer or buffalo could be seen at a great distance--there being nothing to obstruct the view but the rolling surface. On the elevated hill tops the strolling hunter often took his stand to sweep at a glance a large extent of country. The pea vine and grasses occupied the places of the bushes and young forest growth that render the woods of the present day so gloomy and intricate."

One of those travelers tells us that having ridden his horse through a section of the forest where there were acres of wild strawberries then ripe, that his "horse's hoofs and fetlocks looked as though they were covered with blood."

Then too this was a hunter's paradise. John Gossett, who moved into this neighborhood 30 years after Antioch became a church, once told me that then he "could not go into the woods to pick up a pine knot without jumping up a deer."

Many years later I was riding near this church when his son stopped our horses to point out the spot in the road where he once saw a wild turkey cross and go behind the church. She was followed by another and still another, until when he stopped counting 14 had passed. Now this occurred 50 years after Antioch had been built, and gives you a faint conception of what it must have been in 1800.

Here let us learn something about a man who had much to do with our church.

Two hundred years ago there was living in England a family by the name of Asbury. In 1745 a child was born to whom they gave the name Francis. His mother was a woman of great piety, and Francis followed in her footsteps, attending a Methodist meeting he was converted and at the age of 17 was licensed to be a local preacher. At 21 he became a traveling preacher. When 26 years of age he came to America, and at 39 he was a bishop.

A NOTABLE MAN

Were it not for Bishop Asbury we would not be able to give this history of Antioch. Fortunately for us, he kept a journal, putting down day by day an account of his travels and work. Let us quote from his journal:

"Friday, November 14, 1800: We had no small labor getting down Saluda Mountain. Arriving at Father Douthets on the south branch of Saluda, I found myself quite at home. So on the 14th of November we were at the foot of the grand mountain division of South Carolina."

At another place he tells us Father Douthet lived near Table mountain.

"November 15: Came 15 miles to Samuel Burdines in Pendleton county. Brother Whatcoat preached. We administered the Lord's Supper. Sister Burdine professes to have known the Lord 20 years."

Two years later we find this entry:

"Tuesday November 2, 1802: We labored along 16 mountain miles eight ascent on the west side and as many on the east side of the mountain. The descent of the Saluda exceeds all I know from the province of Maine to Kentucky. I had dreaded it fearing I should not be able to walk or ride such steeps; nevertheless, with time, patience, labor and two sticks, and above all a good Providence, I came about 5 o'clock to ancient Father Douthet's in Greenville County, S. C."

Wednesday, November 17, 1802: Directed my course to Solomon James' in the neighborhood of George's Creek, Pendleton county. I preached the funeral sermon of Polly James, the daughter of my host. Here I met Maj. James Tarrant, a local preacher, riding the circuit. We went to Samuel Burdine's and lodged."

"Friday: I preached at Samuel Burdine's."

We note this: The bishop's visits were during the winter months. Tradition says that a brush arbor was the first summer meeting place of New Hope, the first name of the new congregation, later changed to Antioch. During the winter months they met for preaching at the home of Solomon James and Samuel Burdine. Of course the brush arbor was a temporary affair soon superseded by a log building.

The first location was about a mile due east from the present site.

A NEW SITE

Now let us come to the second building, on new site: About the year 1830 we find in this neighborhood three sisters, one Betsy, the wife of Colonel Easley; another Patsy, the wife of Mr. John Gossett; while the third, never married, and was always known as Miss Polly King. All were noted for their religious zeal, and Antioch grew, for then as now, a church is carried by the aid of its consecrated women.

It is said they were instrumental in having the church moved to the present site, and we have every reason to believe that its name became Antioch at this time.

One who recalls this building describes it as having formerly been occupied by Colonel Easley's overseer--A large room with shed room at side. When it was determined to use it for the "meeting house" the planks making the partition were removed but the studding was allowed to remain. Thus the two rooms became one. The seats on the women's side were made of sawed lumber, but the seats for the men were slabs with four pegs put in for legs, and without backs! The openings to give light were closed with shutters--no glass panes were used.

For years after this building disappeared there still remained a gigantic oak, under whose shade the overseer's home was built. afterwards used as the church. We once measured and found the limbs had a spread of 80 feet while three feet from ground the body measured 19 feet around. It was the last survivor of the original forest. This building was followed in 1880 by one with glass windows, and it was to this new building we came in 1881 bringing our letter.

A BITTER DAY

Well do we remember that first Sunday--a bitter cold day and no heat in the church. Too wet to make a brush fire in the yard at which the people might warm before going in to hear the sermon. However it was determined to revive the Sunday school, and the next Sunday saw a stove and a warm room. That stove was an innovation.

When, a short time after, an organ was installed, that put an end to a custom that was gradually falling into disuse, the "lining out of the hymn" by the preacher--a custom that was necessary when the congregation did not have hymn books.

In the roll of members we find the names Gossett, Addington, King, Kay, Brissey, Pickens, Burdine, Harrison, Garrison, Hamilton, Norris, Granger, Hammond, Lark, Loggins and others.

The circuit was composed of 12 churches. Rev. S.P.H. Elwell was Preacher in Charge. He was a consecrated man of superior ability. He had been a soldier in the Confederate army and in battle had lost an arm and three fingers from the remaining hand. Yet, when his pair of run-away horses were curbed as they dashed into the church yard, everybody was willing to admit that he had one of the qualifications necessary for the circuit rider--he understood horses and could "manage them with one hand." His salary that year was $501.88.

The poor had the gospel preached to them--the churches were full. The theme of the sermons was the nature and offices of Christ, His atonement and intercession

The text most frequently used, "Ye must be born again." Such always appeals to the spiritual needs of a people. Let us return to the buildings. This one built in 1860 after serving the people about 32 years gave way to the present brick structure which was dedicated by Bishop Derlington.

In getting up this data we have uncovered some local history that should not be forgotten.

The location of Solomon James' home. Tradition says that its site was where now stands the home of Mr. John Loggins. In this yard stands a mate for the old oak at Antioch. While its limbs have fallen, the gnarled body today had a circumference of 20-1/2 feet.

We now come to something exceedingly interesting. Bishop Asbury refers several times to the home of Samuel Burdine--in it he lodged and preached. Solomon James' home has long disappeared, but how about Samuel Burdine's? There is a large two storied log building known as the old Richard Burdine place. Geographically it fits into the location described by the bishop as Samuel Burdine's, but on the chimney we find the date 1823, so that can't be Samuel's--it must have been built by Richard.

But going upon an adjoining farm, owned by Mr. Jim Davis, he points out an old two storied house and gives the history. It originally was adjacent to the site now occupied by Richard's house, and was removed after he had completed his building. And the old people say that Richard is Samuel's son, and that this old house was Samuel's home wherein the bishop was his guest.

Recently we visited an old family burial ground. We were delighted to find an old slab with this inscription: "Richard Burdine-1773-1860...When six years of age he joined the Methodist Episcopal Church."

So this happened in 1779-90. Bishop Asbury in writing of Samuel's wife says: "Sister Burdine professes to have known the Lord 20 years." The bishop wrote in 1800: So Sister Burdine "found the Lord" during the year 1779-80.

Does not this point to an outpouring of the Spirit that blest mother and son at one end the same time?
