Hester Origins Pre-Date Easley Founding

The Easley Progress, Dec. 3, 1931

Had Lucetta Mauldin Hester lived till the 27th of November, she would have been 88 years and three months of age, having been born on the 27th of August, 1843, in a home that stood about where the dwelling of Mrs. Harry Snider now stands. She was the daughter of the late Milton Mauldin and his wife, Sarah O'Dell Mauldin of this, Pickens County. Soon after her birth, her father moved to his farm on Golden Creek, about two or three miles west of Pickensville, where he was engaged in farming, milling and the manufacture of wagons for a number of years.

At the age of 16 years, or to be more exact, on September 8, 1859, she was happily married to Mr. James B. Hester, who was a widower with three children. They settled on the Oolenoy River, where he owned a farm of fine bottom land, and when the War Between the States began, he like many of his neighbors, was called to the front and until the surrender in 1865, his young wife had to care for his children and manage the farm. She was equal to the emergency and when he returned from the war, he found plenty of corn in his crib and meat in the smokehouse.

In 1884, Mr. Hester moved to Easley to secure the advantages of the schools here for his children. The family had increased, Mrs. Hester was the mother of ten children, nine sons and one daughter. One of the sons died in infancy, and the daughter, Sallie, a beautiful and lovely young girl, also became a victim of the Grim Reaper just as she was budding into young womanhood. Sarah Lucetta Hester (1878-1909) age 30 years.

The eight sons, all of whom survive their mother, are; Baylus M. Hester of Calhoun, GA, James B. of Tryon, NC, Elbert and Robert M. of Oklahoma, William B. and E.J. of Easley, Sam T. and Ralph M. of Texas.

James B. Hester, Tryon, NC, who is in the Real Estate business attended. Mr. Elbert Mauldin Dropped Dead Thurs. Jan.1917

The people of this town and community were shocked and saddened late Thursday afternoon when it became known that Mr. Elbert Mauldin had dropped dead at his farm near Pickens. (Owned a Cotton Farm) Doctors pronounced his death due to heart failure. Mr. Mauldin was engaged in working on a public road thru his farm and was driving a team which was hitched to a scoop when he tottered and fell without any warning whatever. He had two negroes assisting him and one of them caught his body before it fell to the ground, but death was instantaneous and Mr. Mauldin never spoke after he was stricken. There was no warning whatever that death was near and Mrs. Mauldin states that her husband had been unusually bright and cheerful during the day. Elbert Mauldin was the eldest son of E. E. Mauldin of near Easley. He was 46 years old and, besides his father, he is survived by his widow, who was Miss Ora Boggs of Liberty, two brothers and ten sisters. He was a member of the Methodist church and funeral services were conducted at the Pickens Methodist church Saturday by the pastor, Rev. E. T. Hodges, and Rev. J.C. Bailey, pastor of the Presbyterian church here after which the body was laid to rest in the Pickens Cemetery. Before he married, Mr. Mauldin went to Texas and lived there several years. About 14 years ago he returned to this county and a year or so later married and has since made his home in Pickens and engaged in farming. An interesting story from an article written as Joe Scott (a great-great grandson) told it to the reporter. Published in the Tupelo, MS Daily Journal

Both Mr. and Mrs. Scott were born in Alabama. They were land owners in their native state, but the land was poor, and Mississippi looked like greener pastures. They came to Tishomingo County the same year they were married. They later lived in Prentiss and then in Lee County.

Mrs. Scott died four years ago, and Mr. Scott moved to Arkansas where he makes his home with a daughter, Mrs. W. T. Hammett.

Mr. Scott, a missionary Baptist, was a preacher for many years. Still active, he can see without glasses and is a constant reader. His favorite food is wild game, which he has often hunted and still does to some extent.

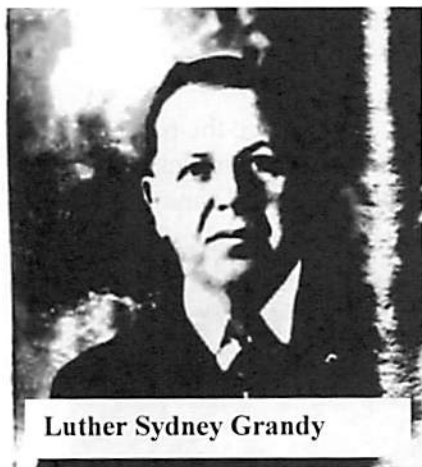

The hunter evidently inherited his love for field and stream from the Indian maiden whom his great-great grandfather married during the Indian war. Like Captain John Smith, the grandfather was captured by Indians and was saved from death by marrying an Indian maiden of the tribe. Later when he gained his freedom the wife was not left behind but was carried back to Alabama by her husband where they lived for many years.

Mr. Scott's father, Rubin Scott, a native of Alabama, served the full four years of the Civil War in the Confederate Cavalry and rode the same horse throughout the war. He fought in the Battle of Brice's Crossroads, six miles west of Baldwyn.

Today Mr. Scott enjoys television, and the quiz programs are his specialty, for he likes to match his knowledge with that of the quiz contestants.

Artifacts in the Attic

What do Blue Willow Dishes have to do with the “Blue Plate Special”?

LaMarr Brooks

There are a few of us who still remember the “blue plate special”. It was a low-priced meal served in restaurants, diners and cafes. It was popular during the 1920s to the 1950s and can still be found in nostalgic places today. It was a meal that usually changed daily, offering a meat course with three vegetables and could still be purchased for a quarter (during 1920-1950).

These 2 plates were found in the stored boxes in our attic that came from my grandmother, France Perrin Cheatham Gilliam’s home in Abbeville, SC. She was the 2nd generation to live in the home and it contained items from 2 generations before her. It was my Mother-in-law, Julie Ann Quartermus Brooks that had a passion for the Blue Willow dishes and owned many of them. But these were different. Researching them turned up some interesting and unknown facts about the Blue Willow plates.

The “blue plate special” that was advertised by diners derives its name from the Blue Willow grill plates used on trains and in restaurants. The first known use of blue-plate special was on a menu of the Fred Harvey restaurants on 22 October 1892. These restaurants were built at stations to serve the travelling public on the Atchison, Topeka, and Santa Fe Railroad and it seems the blue-plate set meal was designed to rapidly serve passengers whose trains stopped only for a few minutes. “As to why the term ‘blue plate’ — no mystery here. Fred Harvey bought nearly all his serving plates from a company in Illinois. Modelling their inexpensive but sturdy plates after those made famous by Josiah Wedgwood ... these were, of course, blue in color. Thus, quite literally, the ‘blue plate’ special”. [Quinlon, Michael. “Blue-Plate Special”. World Wide Word].

Some may remember the Judy Garland 1946 movie “The Harvey Girls” about a crew of young women traveling out to open a “Harvey House” restaurant at a remote whistle-stop to provide good cooking and wholesome company for railway travelers.

The Blue Willow Dishes began when trade between Europe and China opened up in the 16th century through explorers like Marco Polo. The English fell in love with the beautiful Chinese blue and white porcelain, which they imported by the ton.

It was the English potter and founder of the English Spode pottery works, Josiah Spode (23 Mar 1733 – 18 Aug 1797) that made the Blue Willow Pattern popular. He is credited with the establishment of blue underglaze transfer printing in Staffordshire (1781–84), and the improved formula for bone China (a form of soft-paste porcelain) which became and remains the standard for all English wares of this kind.

The Manufacture's name on the back of our plates says Maruta-Made in Japan. During the 1920's, the Japanese began producing their version of Blue Willow China. The coloring is more heavily saturated on the Japanese dishes than on most American pieces, as well as some English.

There is an English story about the plates that may or may not have links to China; it was first published as "The Story of the Common Willow Pattern Plate" in the magazine The Family Friend in 1849. "Porcelain, The Willow Pattern, and Chinoiserie" by Joseph J Portanova, New York University.

THE ROMANTIC FABLE

Once there was a wealthy Mandarin, who had a beautiful daughter (Koong-se). She had fallen in love with her father's humble accounting assistant (Chang), angering her father. (It was inappropriate for them to marry due to their difference in social class.) He dismissed the young man and built a high fence around his house to keep the lovers apart. The Mandarin was planning for his daughter to marry a powerful Duke. The Duke arrived by boat to claim his bride, bearing a box of jewels as a gift. The wedding was to take place on the day the blossom fell from the willow tree.

On the eve of the daughter's wedding to the Duke, the young accountant, disguised as a servant, slipped into the palace unnoticed. As the lovers escaped with the jewels, the alarm was raised. They ran over a bridge, chased by the Mandarin, whip in hand. They eventually escaped on the Duke's ship to the safety of a secluded island, where they lived happily for years. But one day, the Duke learned of their refuge. Hungry for revenge, he sent soldiers, who captured the lovers and put them to death. The gods, moved by their plight, transformed the lovers into a pair of doves.

If you have a Blue Willow China set and want to know how old it is or how much it is worth, you should go to one of the conventions held by the International Willow Collectors club. At these conventions, there will be many people who know how to date Blue Willow China sets and can tell you how much it is worth. You may even be able to sell it to an interested collector who is attending the convention if you decide that you want to sell your Blue Willow China set.

THE WILLIAMSON TUNNELS

Many plates featuring the Willow pattern were found in Williamson's tunnels. The Williamson Tunnels are a series of extensive subterranean excavations, of unknown purpose, in the Edge Hill area of Liverpool, England. They are thought to have been created under the direction of tobacco merchant, landowner and philanthropist Joseph Williamson between 1810 and 1840. Although popularly described as "tunnels", the majority comprise brick or stone vaulting over excavations in the underlying sandstone. The purpose of the works remains unclear and remains a subject of heavy speculation; suggestions include commercial quarrying, a philanthropic desire to provide employment, and Williamson's own eccentric interests.

After being gradually infilled with rubble and spoil during the late 19th and early 20th centuries, they remained largely inaccessible until archaeological investigations were carried out in 1995. Since then, volunteers have rediscovered and excavated an extensive network of tunnels, chambers and voids across several sites, with sections open to the public. From:

THE 1950 US CENSUS

Aaron Goodwin

Harry S. Truman was president, the post-WWII economic boom was in full swing, New York was the most populous state, Charles M. Schulz's Peanuts first appeared in seven newspapers, and the total US population barely exceeded 150M for the first time at 150,697,361. It was a 14.5% increase over the 1940 population, but less than half the 2020 population of 331,449,281. By now you certainly know that images of the Federal Census for that year will be released to the public for the first time on April 1st. Also for the first time, an Optical Character Recognition (OCR)-generated electronic index will be available from Day One. The National Archives has a page dedicated to the 1950 Census, where links to the census images, electronic index, and a download of the full 1950 Census dataset will appear April 1st. Images and the index will appear shortly later on FamilySearch and Ancestry, but the National Archives will be the first place to see them. Between now and April 1st, you can explore several of the National Archives' related pages to prepare. See the links below, along with a few descriptions of what you'll find on some of those pages:

FamilySearch has its own page dedicated to the 1950 Census. They explain that the initial electronic index is being created by Ancestry. Then FamilySearch, Ancestry, and NGS will lead genealogical societies and volunteers across the country in the 1950 U.S. Census Community Project. Over the course of a few months immediately following April 1st, those working in the Community Project will correct and improve the electronic index. Sign up on this page to get updates about the census release and further instructions about the Community Project when it begins. And ask your local society leaders if they're part of the project. If not, they can sign up on the same page. You might also ask them if they're society members of NGS. If they are, they'll already know all about the project and how to participate.

Stephen P. Morse's One-Step Webpages site will prove critical for many researchers. If you don't find your ancestors easily in the electronic index, this is the next place to go. You'll see his site includes guides for a number of resources in addition to the 1950 Census, but the 1950 census is already thoroughly represented. In particular, see Stephen P. Morse and Joel D. Weintraub's "Getting Ready for the 1950 Census: Searching With and Without a Name Index." See also Joel D. Weintraub's YouTube channel "JDW Talks," where he has made (and continues to make) several videos about the 1950 Census.

Finally, we're bound to discover questions and challenges after we dive into the 1950 Census that we don't yet have today. I'm willing to bet that April will see a message thread dedicated to just this topic on the NGS Forum where members and experts can ask questions, exchange ideas, get answers, solve problems, and enrich their family's stories. I personally hope a second message thread gets started on Forum: "What I never expected to discover in the 1950 Census."

[1] The NARA page does not clarify that questions 34 through 38 apply only to heads of household 14 and older, but the form itself makes that explicit.

[2] The back of Form P1 relates to specifics of the dwelling itself rather than to the individuals. A thorough description of your family's home environment could provide a lot of context for the personal data, but the back side was not microfilmed in 1952 and is no longer extant.
